CREDIT COURSES
FUNDAMENTS OF IMPROVISATION AND COMPOSITION:
DANCE (MUSIC 105r)
A dance course that explores fundamental skills of improvisation and composition. Using wide-ranging music, experimentation, problem solving, and an equal curiosity about both success and failure — this course explores the processes of analytical and intuitive decision making in the dancing body. Students will learn a series of specific physical tasks, tools, and systems taught through intensive exercises, guided improvisations and rigorous real-time composition. Physical research and written work in the course connect dance to architecture, the visual arts, mathematics, philosophy, science, theater, and literature in ways which link the mind and body to innovation. Enrollment determined by interview during the first week of class. Minimal dance experience required.

Instructor: Jill Johnson, Dance Director & Senior Lecturer
Meeting Time: Wed/Fri, 3-5 pm
Location: Harvard Dance Center, 60 Garden St.

THE HARVARD DANCE PROJECT (MUSIC 12hfr)
The Harvard Dance Project cultivates invention and fosters the courage of artistry. This faculty-led, performance company gives students the opportunity to be original cast members and collaborators in two or more divergent dance works created by preeminent professional choreographers. The project focuses on performance research, collaboration, choreographic composition, and links choreographic thinking to other fields. It is a studio-based course which includes at least 12 performances at major campus venues. Enrollment determined by audition during the first week of class. Dance experience required. Full-year course (runs fall to spring).

Instructor: Jill Johnson, Dance Director & Senior Lecturer
